Discover Denver's historic park system
—in the mountains!

Decades ahead of other Colorado counties and cities, Denver created a mountain open space system outside of the city itself, safeguarded from development and accessible to all citizens. With 14,000 acres of parklands outside of city limits, Denver has one of the most surprising treasures you'll encounter.

Some are known, used, and loved, but park visitors often don't realize they are in a Denver park. The system stretches over five life zones from Summit Lake near the peak of Mt. Evans to the oak woodlands of Daniels Park in Douglas County! And, did you know the history of the bison in Denver's two herds? Their legacy reaches from Yellowstone National Park to the famous Goodnight herd in Texas.

For the first time, you can get the story and the parks in one volume, and enjoy new scenic photographs by John Fielder, Colorado's award-winning landscape photographer. Look for it in your favorite bookstore, or order a copy below.

Explore the history, discover the parks!
Book arrives August 1, 2013!
